

YEEZY Boost 350 v2 "BRED"

The Yeezy Boost 350 V2 'Bred' brings a classic colorway to its minimalist construction. The shoe's upper is built with Primeknit, finished in black and highlighted by the SPLY-350 branding on the side wall. More red marks the heel pull-loop, while rope laces secure the fit. Underfoot, a full-length Boost midsole wrapped in a black rubber cage provides cushioning. A rubber outsole with cutouts provides traction.

The Yeezy Boost 350 V2 'Zebra' released on February 25, 2017, combining an upper white / core black Primeknit with a red SPLY 350 branding and a full-length translucent midsole boost. Air Jordan 1 High “HYPER ROYAL”

The Air Jordan 1 Retro High OG 'Hyper Royal' brings a weathered look to the basketball classic. The shoe's upper features a white leather base, overlaid by suede that sports a faded blue aesthetic. Light Smoke Grey complements the Swoosh and padded collar, while underfoot, a white Air midsole is included for cushioning. Further Light Smoke Grey emerges on the concentric rubber outsole.

Air Jordan 1 Mid “UNIVERSITY GOLD”

The pair is making use of seldom seen color blocking. The bright yellow pigmented hits are being dressed atop the toe box, the eye stay, the ankle flaps, and even the branding both by way of the Swoosh and tongue tab. Adjacent, white covers the forefoot more widespread, blocked little as it transitions from the mid-panel to the toe cap. Black sees a similar utilization as it primarily leads atop the entire lace unit as well as the lining and collar.

Paying tribute to Michael Jordan's college alma mater, the Air Jordan 1 Retro High OG 'University Blue' features a University of North Carolina look. Built entirely with leather, the shoe's upper appears in a mix of white and University Blue, contrasted by black on the Swoosh, collar, laces and 'Wings' logo. Perforations on the toe box provide breathability, while underfoot, the Air midsole gives way to a concentric outsole with a brighter shade of blue.
